About the Cover

During my busy college years I've appreciated the squirrels on our campus. Many a hectic day has been sweetened by taking a moment to watch these friendly creatures scampering along sidewalks or doing highwire acts on telephone lines.

Like most of us, the Eastern Fox Squirrel is not a native of this area. When they were first introduced to the Walla Walla Valley it was not certain that they would survive. Today the abundance of these critters testifies to their ability to adapt.

We also have a challenge to adapt successfully. Each academic year brings new people, new classes, new ideas and, for some, a new school. For many Walla Walla College is a very long way from home.

But catch a glimpse of the Eastern Fox Squirrel. God has taken care of him and He will take care of you.

On the Back Cover

Portland Adventist Medical Center

Some Walla Walla College students begin their professional careers with nursing or respiratory therapy training and education on the Portland Campus. Others find their way to Christian Service later in medical, paramedical and other supportive vocations. The new Nursing education and dormitory buildings, housing WWC's largest department—dedicated July 15, 1979—are at the upper right of the Medical Center (foreground). Mt. Hood dominates the background across a rapidly growing suburban and semi-rural area.
